I found a testing framework known as Robot. Robot differs from UnitTest in a few ways. A big thing that sets them apart is the way the testing is done. Robot is very simple and keyword-based. It also gives you a large GUI interface within your browser to have a better understanding of the tests. I think it would be beneficial for most programs to use this testing framework, it appears to be the gold standard.